

Educational/Occupational Research

By researching educational and occupational opportunities you can make good decisions about what is right for you. Following is a list of websites that are helpful in obtaining more information.

<http://www.bls.gov/oco/home.htm>

Occupational Outlook Handbook – developed by the Department of Labor, information includes: training and education needed, earnings, expected job prospects, what workers do on the job, working conditions and more for hundreds of occupations.

http://www.hireosugrads.com/general_student.asp?id=222

The Vault Library has information about specific types of careers, employers and industries. This service accessible through the OSU Career Services website is free for OSU students.

<http://www.collegegrad.com/careers/>

Based on the US Department of Labor, CollegeGrad.com, is another resource for researching occupations and careers.

<http://www.careerinfonet.org/>

America's CAREER Info Net provides occupational information and state specific information. This website is maintained by the state of Minnesota.

<http://online.onetcenter.org/>

Occupational Information Network, O*NET Online, breaks down occupations by tasks, skills needed, abilities, knowledge, etc.

<http://www.careeroverview.com/>

CareerOverview.com is a non-commercial website dedicated to providing aspiring career professionals and students with relevant, reliable and up-to-date career and job information whereby helping them to make better, more informed career choices.

<http://www.aviationcareerguide.com/>

Aviation Career Guide - information on flight school training, studying for an aviation degree, military flying and all the certificates including PPL, CPL, ATPL, CFI, CFII and MEI.

<http://www.nata.org/downloads/documents/306CareerInfoBrochure.pdf>

National Athletic Trainers Association description of an Athletic Training Career

<http://www.unixl.com/dir/education/>

UniXL >> Education and Teaching Information. UniXL provides students, general public and businesses with high quality and relevant education and careers related resources.

<http://www.aahperd.org/aahe/template.cfm?template=publications-jobs.html>

American Association for Health Education description of careers.

<http://www.princetonreview.com/grad/>

The Princeton Review of graduate schools

<http://gradschool.about.com/>

Several articles from About.com focus on how to apply to graduate school, why you should go, etc.

<http://www.petersons.com/Default.asp?ShowTab=gr>

Peterson's Planner helps you plan graduate school.

In addition to searching on the internet, the College of Education Career Services office has a Career Library that contains books about careers and graduate school. Another resource for research is the OSU Library.