

Helpful Websites

Websites with helpful information:

- www.controlyourcredit.gov – U.S. Department of Treasury and the Ad Council’s campaign website to combat the issue of excessive debt and financial illiteracy through an interactive game.
- www.studentaid.ed.gov - The official student aid website of the U.S. Department of Education provides information on all federal programs.
- www.finaid.org - This information site, owned by Monster Worldwide and published by Mark Kantrowitz, provides information on student financial aid, calculators, and other comprehensive financial aid information.
- www.students.gov - This official U.S. government web site provides access to information and resources on planning and paying for education, career development, campus life, online study help and more.
- www.mappingyourfuture.org - This information site is a national collaborative, public-service, nonprofit organization providing career, college, financial aid, and financial literacy services.
- www.studentloanborrowerassistance.org - This program of the National Consumer Law Center provides information on the rights and responsibilities of student loan borrowers.
- www.projectonstudentdebt.org - This advocacy group offers advice for loan borrowers and helps identify cost effective solutions.
- edlabor.house.gov - U.S. Committee on Education and Labor provides information on the College Cost Reduction and Access Act of 2007.

The posting of these websites does not imply endorsement or support by OSU.